DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

1. Claim 1 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kang et al. (U.S. 6,330,042).

Kang et al. discloses a liquid crystal display comprising a transparent pixel electrode, gate insulator, and passivation layer. Note in figure 5e, the pixel electrode 141, passivation layer 137, and gate insulator 117. Kang et al. teaches that an inorganic insulating material such as silicon nitride is deposited on the gate electrode to form the gate insulator. See column 5, lines 29-32. Kang et al. teaches that an inorganic insulating material such as silicon oxide is deposited on the whole surface of the substrate 101 to form a passivation layer 137. See column 5, lines 54-56. An ITO layer is deposited on the passivation layer and patterned to form the pixel electrode 141, gate connector 157, and source pad connector 167. See column 5, line 65 – column 6, line 5.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 2 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kang et al. (U.S. 6,330,042) in further view of Senior (U.S. 6,466,686), Itsumi et al. (U.S. 5,559,504), Fujiwara (U.S. 6,185,319), and Harkin (U.S. 6,327,376).

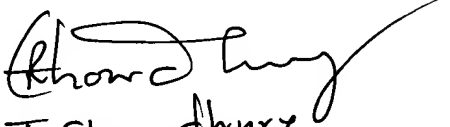

Kang et al. does not teach using the disclosed liquid crystal display as a fingerprint sensor. However, it was well known and obvious to use a liquid crystal display as part of a fingerprint sensing apparatus in order to display information. Evidence of this is provided in the disclosures of Harkin (column 9, lines 13-29), Itsumi et al. (column 11, lines 19-30), Senior (column 4, lines 8-13), and Fujiwara (column 9, lines 20-30). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to use the liquid crystal display of Kang et al. in a fingerprint sensing apparatus in order to display information.
